Libraries Then and Now

Libraries are changing a lot. In the past, libraries were mostly filled with books and card catalogs. People had to use a catalog to find a book and then they had to search for it on the shelves. It could take a long time to find what they were looking for.

Today, libraries are very different. They still have books, but they also have computers, e-books, and other technology. There are also online catalogs to search for books from anywhere. People can even check out books digitally.

Libraries are also more than just a place to check out books.

They offer programs like story times, book clubs, and workshops. Many libraries also have rooms where people can meet, study, and work.

4. How do you find books in the libraries in the past?

5. What can you find in libraries today?
