Billy is very small and he loves pictures very much. His mother often draws some for him on some pieces of paper. She is very bad at drawing, but Billy enjoys her pictures and always wants more. So, Billy's mother gives him some pencils and a drawing book, and he begins drawing pictures too, but they are not good.

Again, Billy's mother buys him a small blackboard, some pieces of chalk and a duster. He likes those very much. Today, he is trying to draw a picture of his father on the blackboard. He is drawing lines and rubbing them out when his mother comes across. She looks at the picture and asks "What are you drawing, son?". Billy stops drawing and looks at the picture, "I am drawing daddy, mum. Oh, sorry, mum, I think I'm drawing a monkey, mum. It needs a tail on it. I'm not drawing daddy as I think."
