A Trip to the National Park

Last month our school organized a trip to a national park. Early in the morning we got on the bus and travelled for two hours. When we arrived, the weather was perfect: warm, sunny, and not windy at all. The park was very big and beautiful. There were high hills, green fields, and a small lake in the center. Many tourists came there to walk, relax, and enjoy nature. Our teacher told us that this national park is protected because many rare animals and plants live there.

During the trip we walked along special paths so we wouldn't disturb the wildlife. We saw different kinds of birds, rabbits, and even a family of deer. Our guide explained that the workers of the park feed the animals in winter and clean the area to keep it safe. My classmates took many photos, and some of us drew sketches of the trees and flowers. I didn't expect it, but walking in the forest made me feel calm and happy.

After lunch we visited a small information center where we watched a short film about the history of the park. We learned how people damaged nature in the past and what they are doing now to protect it. Before we left, we bought souvenirs made from natural materials. When the trip ended and we returned home, I felt tired but very satisfied. It was one of the most interesting school trips I've ever had.
