You say you want to be a fitness instructor?Read "A day in the life" of fitness instructor Kelly Sherwood

I'm a fitness instructor. I work at a gym with individual customers. That means that I work with one person at a time. People think my job is easy and fun but there's more to it than that.

Firstly, I have to work long hours. That's because I have to be with my customers at the gym before they start work. So, I usually get up at 5:00 A.M. to be on time for my first class at 6:30 A.M. But I also have customers who want to work out at lunch or after work. That means that I work until 8:00 or 9:00 P.M. Of course, many people can only work out on the weekend, so my Saturdays and Sundays aren't usually free.

I have to make a lot of plans for each day. That's what a lot of people don't understand. They think you can arrive at the class and start. But I have to choose the right exercises for each customer. Some of them have injuries, but want to stay fit. Others want to make different muscles stronger. Everyone is different. It takes a lot of time to make plans. I also like to make a music playlist for every customer. I could make different ones for each person, but I don't have to.

It's hard work being a fitness instructor, but I love it. I help my customers to get fit and stay fit. They hate me during the class but love me after it! That's because I work them hard, but they know it's helping them get stronger. Many of my customers are now my friends and we socialize together.
