

MY FOOD FESTIVAL BLOG

Hello. I'm Hiroshi from Japan. Japan is an interesting country, and we have many food festivals. Here are two I like.

The first food festival of the year is the Snow Festival in February in Hokkaido. In Winter, there is a lot of fresh seafood and warm dishes. At the festival, you can join a cooking class to learn how to make traditional miso soup or tasty seafood hot pot. There's also an ice sculpture competition that brings artists from around the world.

Every May, there's a green tea festival in Shizuoka. You can enjoy treats like matcha ice cream and green tea cookies, along with savory foods like green tea noodles. Or... how about some matcha-flavored sushi? It's really nice, I promise!

- 1 Does Hiroshi hate matcha-flavored sushi?
- 2 When is the Green Tea Festival?
- 3 Which festival has a cooking class?
- 4 What festival is the first of the year?
- 5 Where is the Green Tea Festival?
- 6 Who participates in the ice sculpture competition?

