

European Expansion in the World

Exchange of goods and services between individuals, societies, countries.	<input type="text"/>
Desirable results of a competition, conflict, or confrontation, received by the winner.	<input type="text"/>
Set of scientific Knowledge and tools.	<input type="text"/>
Use a magnetic needle to indicate magnetic north.	<input type="text"/>
Measures the height of the stars relative to the horizon, used to calculate latitude.	<input type="text"/>
Navigational charts used to show the position of harbours and coastlines.	<input type="text"/>
Consisting of a rope and a piece of wood (chip) at the end, measured ship speed.	<input type="text"/>
Persuade someone to adopt a different religious faith.	<input type="text"/>
Period from the 15th to the 16th century during which the Europeans explored territories that were unknown to them.	<input type="text"/>
People who inhabited the land for millennia before European contact and their descendants.	<input type="text"/>
European name for the continent of the Americas after the voyages of Christopher Columbus between 1492 and 1506.	<input type="text"/>
A territory controlled by another country, and occupied by settlers from that country	<input type="text"/>
Country that controls one or more colonies.	<input type="text"/>
Resources that are processed to manufacture finished goods.	<input type="text"/>
A system that enables some countries to enrich themselves by exploiting resources of other countries.	<input type="text"/>
A country where production costs are lower than the country of origin.	<input type="text"/>
A group of territories and peoples ruled by a single governing power.	<input type="text"/>
The control, occupation, and exploitation of a territory and its peoples by an external state.	<input type="text"/>
System of commercial trade that operates on a global scale.	<input type="text"/>
The practice or system of owing persons as legal property, denying them any freedoms or rights.	<input type="text"/>
The values, language, customs, way of life, and other elements shared by a people or society.	<input type="text"/>

The compass

Indigenous people

Empire

Age of Exploration

Trade

Offshore

The Chip Log

Mother country

The astrolabe

Raw materials

Stakes

Colony

Economic Colonialism

Portolan Charts

Colonialism

Technology

Convert

World Economy

New World

Slavery

Culture