computer games and T-shirts. Of course, you can't try on things when you buy them on the Internet, so I never buy shoes online. I go running and play basketball, and I'm looking for new sneakers now—but I want to buy them in a store.

Kylie Ellis Parkersburg, West Virginia

Go to outlet centers for great clothes and cheap prices.

Stores in outlet centers usually sell last year's fashions. You can't get very new things there, but you can buy some very nice things. We live near an outlet center, and my cousin is working there for the summer. I often meet him in a restaurant at the outlet center on Saturdays in his lunch break. We have lunch there, and then I go shopping. It's great. I want to go there today because I'm looking for a new party dress.

Scott McClure      East Haven, Connecticut

Buy at thrift stores—and give them your old things.

This week, I'm cleaning my room and putting old things into boxes. I'm not putting them out with the trash like old food—I always take old things to Goodwill. Goodwill is a thrift store—it sells old things. It uses the money to help people in my town. I often buy things at Goodwill, too. I want to help the charity. I have a cool coat from there, and we have a nice lamp from Goodwill in our living room. My mom often buys books at Goodwill.

Mira Novak      Seattle, Washington

Go to weekend markets for low prices!

There's a cool Sunday market here in Seattle. It's called Fremont Market, and the people there sell a lot of different things—books, clothes, and music. There are food stalls with a lot of fantastic dishes at the market, and there are entertainers like singers and dancers, too. You can have lunch and listen to music. It's a great place to go in the summer.
