

Last weekend, our class went on a school camping trip to the mountains. It was our first long trip without parents, so everyone was excited. We packed our backpacks carefully and took everything we needed: a map, a torch, a first-aid kit and warm clothes.

On Friday evening, we arrived at the campsite and put up our tents. The weather was warm and calm. Our teacher explained the rules and told us that we must follow them to stay safe. After dinner, we sat near the fire, talked, played board games and shared stories.

On Saturday morning, we got up early and went hiking. We walked for almost five hours. It was hard, but the views were amazing. Some students took photos, others talked about their future plans. One boy said he wanted to become a professional athlete, and another student said she would like to work with technology in the future.

In the afternoon, we planned to go climbing, but suddenly it started raining. We couldn't go outside, so we stayed in the tents. At first, we were disappointed, but later we played games, listened to music and laughed a lot. It was still a great day.

On Sunday, the weather was better, and we walked back to the bus. When I got home, I was tired but very happy. This trip helped me understand that I love nature and teamwork. I think I will go camping more often in the future.
