

35. MURDER AT THE CULT: A TRUE-CRIME DOCUMENTARY

Inspector Irratino and Deductive Logico took the train upstate to a commune that Irratino had read about in a zine. When they got there, they discovered it was a leaderless society, but only because their supreme leader had just been murdered.

SUSPECTS

She dropped out of the publishing game and moved to this commune. Her father is currently not proud.

5'3" • LEFT-HANDED • BLUE EYES • BLOND HAIR • VIRGO

You can learn a lot about a word from its etymology, like where it came from, and have you heard this before?

5'2" • LEFT-HANDED • GREEN EYES • BLOND HAIR • AQUARIUS

A mathematical and esoteric prodigy. Not only do they know the value of E, they know the meaning of E.

LOCATIONS

Where everyone sleeps except their leader. (Their leader never sleeps.)

More books than you've ever seen. (But all by one guy.)

They seem to hypnotize you. You get woozy around them.

WEAPONS

For casting spells and bashing skulls.

For serving soup at the commune.

Wow, your inner blaxons are really off the chart!

CLUES & EVIDENCE

- The tallest suspect could not have fit in the library: it had low ceilings.
- Whoever was in the barracks had green eyes.

STATEMENTS

(Remember: The murderer is lying. The others are telling the truth.)

Assistant Applegreen: I did not bring a selenite wand.

Philologist Flint: A pseudo-scientific apparatus was not by the ancient ruins.

Numerologist Night: Based on the numbers, I brought a selenite wand.
