Choose between the titles to summarise the problem described in the texts.

You got in an enormous jam right in front of your destination. Apparently, some trucks crashed near the bridge. It was freezing outside, and you were wistfully watching other drivers drinking hot tea from thermoses and eating Knorr dry soups, while you only had some cold water with snacks.
You went travelling to the jungles with your tour group, but decided to wander off the path to take some pictures. Suddenly, there was a huge snake silently creeping towards you and your camera...
At the end of the journey it turned out that you didn't have enough money to fix the flat tyre. You had to ask your relatives in Russia to send you some so that you could make it back home on four wheels.
When you first got to the city where you planned to live for a little while before moving on, you were completely disoriented. You didn't know where to go, how to buy things, or what to do there – you only had plans for your final destination. So, given that you were to stay there for a couple of days, you had to ask for help.
It was a lovely summer evening. You came to the hotel where you booked a room to check in. However, there was a terrible storm just the other night, and the wind broke the windows in your room and now it's all in shatters. Where can you find another room before it gets too dark?
You've taken both cash and credit cards with you in case something went wrong. You were paying for all your food and amusements with cash, and to the end of the journey there was little money left in your pockets. When you were driving home, the gas station told you they didn't accept payment by cards, and you couldn't afford buying fuel with cash.
There was a Chinese student riding with you on a bus. She seemed to be anxious, always looking out of the window. Suddenly she turned to you and said: "Lugh-brary?". You guess she was asking how to get to the library; it was at the next stop. You said to her, "The next stop. Right there" – and pointed at the tall building. She thanked you, got out of the bus and... turned right at the library.
Your tour group stopped at the local park for an hour to rest and to take some photos. You and your friend, using the navigator, decided to jump by the closest trading centre instead. When you were done with shopping, you realised you didn't remember how you got there. There were stairways and turns everywhere... Navigator didn't help, but luckily there were locals to help you get back to your group in time.
You and your mom were waiting at the railway station in Wales for the local train to arrive. Soon before the time of arrival, the speakers said something in English. You didn't catch the meaning, but you guessed they announced the arrival. You went to the platform and waited there, but there was no train... After some time, you went back to the station to find out that the said train was delayed. That was what they announced through the speakers!
Your group was high in the mountains. The scenery was breathtaking, the rocks covered with snow and the vast space of hills lying far beneath you. The mountain trail you were taking was narrow, steep and slippery, so you all had anchor slings. When you finally arrived to the camp, you decided to go back alone to take some photos of the beauty you've seen. What could happen?

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Now give advice to the people in these situations.

You got in an enormous jam right in front of your destination. Apparently, some trucks crashed near the bridge. It was freezing outside, and you were wistfully watching other drivers drinking hot tea from thermoses and eating Knorr dry soups, while you only had some cold water with snacks.
If you're travelling during the winter, you _____ take more food, thermoses and some warm clothes with you.
You went travelling to jungles with your tour group, but decided to walk off the path to take some pictures. Suddenly, there was a huge snake silently creeping towards you and your camera...
You _____ leave your group without notifying the leader, otherwise you can get lost... or worse.
At the end of the journey it turned out that you didn't have enough money to fix the flat tyre. You had to ask your relatives in Russia to send you some so that you could make it back home on four wheels.
If you're travelling by car, you _____ be sure to include all possible car expenses in your planning.
When you first got to the city where you planned to live for a little while before moving on, you were completely disoriented. You didn't know where to go, how to buy things, or what to do there – you only had plans for your final destination. So, given that you were to stay there for a couple of days, you had to ask for help.
No matter how short the stay will be, you _____ learn more about the place.
It was a lovely summer evening. You came to the hotel where you booked a room to check in. However, there was a terrible storm just the other night, and the wind broke the windows in your room and now it's all in shatters. Where can you find another room before it gets too dark?
You'd _____ learn about other variants of accommodation in the area beforehand.
You've taken both cash and credit cards with you in case something went wrong. You were paying for all your food and amusements with cash, and to the end of the journey there was little money left in your pockets. When you were driving home, the gas station told you they didn't accept payment by cards, and you couldn't afford buying fuel with cash.
You _____ use only one method of paying; make sure to have savings in both cash and credit cards available up to the end of the journey.
There was a Chinese student riding with you on a bus. She seemed to be anxious, always looking out of the window. Suddenly she turned to you and said: "Lugh-brary?". You guess she was asking how to get to the library; it was at the next stop. You said to her, "The next stop. Right there" – and pointed at the tall building. She thanked you, got out of the bus and... turned right at the library.
You _____ learn the language of the country you're visiting.
Your tour group stopped at the local park for an hour to rest and to take some photos. You and your friend, using the navigator, decided to jump by the closest trading centre instead. When you were done with shopping, you realised you didn't remember how you got there. There were stairways and turns everywhere... Navigator didn't help, but luckily there were locals to help you get back to your group in time.
_____ leaving your group to wander around when you don't know the place well.
You and your mom were waiting at the railway station in Wales for the local train to arrive. Soon before the time of arrival, the speakers said something in English. You didn't catch the meaning, but you guessed they announced the arrival. You went to the platform and waited there, but there was no train... After some time, you went back to the station to find out that the said train was delayed. That was what they announced through the speakers!
You _____ always pay attention to the announcements.
Your group was high in the mountains. The scenery was breathtaking, the rocks covered with snow and the vast space of hills lying far beneath you. The mountain trail you were taking was narrow, steep and slippery, so you all had anchor slings. When you finally arrived to the camp, you decided to go back alone to take some photos of the beauty you've seen. What could happen?
_____ walk alone without safety equipment in dangerous places!

LIVEWORKSHEETS