

We accepted too much work.

They survived the recession.

She proceeded to talk about training.

We avoided the problem in the end.

They did hours of work on it.

They tend to like wisecracks.

We wrote a few details.

They discovered an accounting error.

She checked the figures with us.

We became involved in an argument.

They postponed the meeting.

The one thing you can't manage without is a sense of humour.

We obtained a bank loan.

They inherited a lot of money.

She started to dislike the idea.

We completed a ton of paperwork.

They issued a press release.

The audience may lose interest.

We got control of the project.

They'll want you to repeat all the main points again.

They received pressure to resign.

Anecdotes and amusing stories seem to be appreciated.

They chose option B.

What matters is how you present yourself as a person.

We had a good relationship.

Be too techie and they'll think you're trying to impress them.

You have to maintain a certain level of formality.

They provided most of the cash.