

Was and Were

A Day to Remember

Last Saturday was a very special day for our school. It was the day of the annual cultural fair, and everyone was excited about it. The classrooms were decorated with colorful posters, and the hallways were full of music and laughter. The weather was sunny, so the students were in a great mood from the beginning.

Early in the morning, the teachers were already at school, but the students weren't all on time. Some of them were late because the buses weren't working properly. Our English teacher wasn't angry; she said that the situation wasn't their fault. The principal was calm, even though things weren't perfect.

In the science room, there was an experiment show. The materials were ready, but a few students weren't prepared to explain the project. They were nervous, and one student said he wasn't comfortable speaking in front of many people. However, the audience was supportive, and the presentation was better than expected.

Outside, there were food stands with traditional dishes. The prices were affordable, but the portions weren't very big. Some parents were happy, while others weren't satisfied with the service. Still, the atmosphere was friendly, and everyone was enjoying the event.

Later in the afternoon, there was a music show. The singers were talented, but the sound system wasn't very good. Some microphones weren't working, and the music was too loud at times. Even so, the students were enthusiastic, and the crowd was cheering loudly.

At the end of the day, everyone was tired, but they were proud of their work. The fair wasn't perfect, and there were some problems, but the experience was memorable. The students were happy, the teachers weren't disappointed, and the day was one that nobody was going to forget.
