

Combine the two sentences into one using the relative pronoun who or which.

Example:

I met a woman at a party. She is my brother's colleague.

→ I met a woman at a party who is my brother's colleague.

1. This is the book. I bought it yesterday.

2. She has a friend. He lives in Australia.

3. We visited a museum. It was very interesting.

4. The man is my teacher. He is wearing a blue shirt.

5. I have a cat. It loves to sleep all day.

6. They know a girl. She speaks five languages.

7. This is the car. My father wants to buy it.

8. I work with people. They come from different countries.

9. The film was very exciting. We watched it last night.

10. There is a doctor in our street. She helps a lot of people.
