Competitive Food Eating

Parents, doctors, and nutritionists tell us to eat healthy, nutritious food and to eat only until our stomachs feel full. However, there are some people who train themselves to eat huge quantities of food.

These people are called competitive food eaters. They compete against each other to eat a lot of food in a short amount of time. Competitive food eaters can earn up to $10,000 or more in prize money for eating the most of some kind of food like hot dogs, pies, or chicken wings.

One of the most famous food-eating contests, Nathan's Hot Dog Eating Contest, takes place on July 4th at New York's Coney Island. Professional food eater Joey Chestnut of San Francisco, California, won this contest five years in a row from 2007 to 2011. Chestnut's best record was in 2009 when he ate 68 hot dogs in 10 minutes.

Another famous competitive eater is Sonya Thomas, who was born in Korea but now lives in the U.S. She began competing in 2002 and quickly became a champion. Some of her personal records include eating 11 pounds of cheesecake in nine minutes and eating 65 hard-boiled eggs in six minutes and 40 seconds.
