Reading - Valentine's Day – I sent a letter to my love...

February 14th is traditionally a celebration of love, so how do people in the UK mark the occasion?

Declarations of love

Sending a Valentine's card to a loved one is a custom that has been going on for at least 150 years, if not longer. Couples will give them to each other, but it is also common to send an anonymous card to someone you secretly love. This practice is particularly common in schools and can be a source of great amusement and embarrassment, as everyone tries to work out who sent a card to whom.

Love and technology

Another way of letting someone know you love them on Valentine's Day is to put an advert in a newspaper. Nowadays, social media sites and mobile phone messages are taking over this role. On Valentine's Day 2008, an estimated 80 million texts were sent between mobile phones, which was six times the number of cards sent by "snail" mail.

Suggested texts include:

- WUBMV – will you be my Valentine
- xoxoxoxoxo – hugs and kisses
- LUWAM<3 – love you with all my heart
- ImRdy4Luv – I'm ready for love
- :'-) – I'm so happy, I'm crying
- ILUVU – I love you

Picture messaging is another way to show Valentine's Day desires. A flirtatious wink or "mmmmm sexy!" shows affection, while horny devils and hearts guarantee to ignite the sparks of passion. For those wanting to cool off an undesirable admirer, the picture of someone washing their hair will guarantee they get the message!

Flowers and chocolates

As well as cards, Valentine's Day also brings a lot of gift-giving, though it is usually men who are expected to give presents to their wives and girlfriends. Flowers and chocolates remain popular choices, roses being the most popular, but advice from magazines and newspapers is usually that men should try to be more imaginative.

One Cotswolds hotel is offering a chocoholics weekend for two. Dinner is asparagus in a white chocolate sauce, followed by a chocolate treasure hunt around the local area. Maybe they could take some inspiration from this!

Wackier gifts

For those who think these ideas seem a little mundane, there is an ever-increasing range of more unusual gifts to give the one you love. How about a helicopter flight for men or a balloon ride for women? Or maybe the chance to test-drive a Ferrari for him, and a pampering session at a health club for her?

As with other holidays and events, Valentine's Day is an opportunity for ever-increasing commercialism. For the truly committed, Valentine's Day is a popular day to either propose or get married — you'd never forget your wedding anniversary!
