MOBILE PHONES 1

QT

1. While it is true that mobile devices are convenient and help us stay more better connected, our social
2. skills seem to be getting worse and worse either. According to a recent survey, the majority of people
3. think about that smartphones, laptops, tablets and social media have made us ruder. People texting
4. in lots public places or shouting into their phones while travelling on public transport are a common
5. sight. Very often we pay more attention to both our Facebook account than the person sitting in front of
6. us. Many others institutions are trying to bring good old etiquette back. This shops across the UK are
7. putting up signs informing so customers that they won't be served while talking on the phone. Banks
8. and post offices itself forbid the use of mobile phones too. There are also numerous online campaigns
9. that make people aware of the basic rules of polite behaviour. All of them come down to a few simple fact:
10. enough use your common sense and if you think it will be rude, don't do it.
