Ha, Ha, Ha!

It's just after 6:30 in the morning in Mumbai, India. About 20 men and women of all ages are running around in a city park, breathing deeply and cracking up with laughter. Their leader, a 50-year-old man, is wearing a T-shirt with a photo of himself and his wife smiling widely. "Now," he says, "the Lion Laugh," and they all raise their hands, stick out their tongues and laugh loudly. "Ha, ha, ha! Ho, ho, ho! Hee, hee, hee!"

About 11 years ago, Dr. Madan Kataria, the man in the T-shirt, wrote an article for a health magazine about laughter being the best medicine. While he was doing research for the article, he discovered that laughter actually makes you feel better, whether you are laughing for real or pretending to laugh. After he wrote the article, he was inspired by what he had learned. Suddenly, at four in the morning, an idea came to him. Three hours later, Dr. Kataria and his wife were walking – and laughing – in a park near their home with a small group of people. The first Laughter Club had begun.

Dr. Kataria says that in Mumbai it is important to laugh. Life is not easy in Mumbai. It is one of India's busiest and biggest cities. Between 13 and 19 million people live there, and half of them live in slums*. However, Dr. Kataria believes that they don't need a comedian and they don't even need a sense of humor in order to feel good. They just need to join a Laughter Club.

To become a member of a Laughter Club you don't have to pay any money. You just have to come and laugh with a group of people. Today, there are more than 5,000 laughter clubs in India. The clubs work together to get the world laughing at least one day a year – on World Laughter Day. This is good news for Dr. Kataria, whose dream is "to bring about world peace through laughter". It means he is one step closer to seeing his dream come true.
