CITY LIFE: ADVANTAGES AND CHALLENGES

Living in the city has many advantages but also comes with challenges. First of all, cities offer better access to health care, education, and job opportunities than rural areas. People can find a variety of services and facilities that make life more convenient. For example, in a big city, you don't have to travel far to see a doctor or visit a school. However, city life can be very stressful. It is common for people to waste large amounts of time stuck in traffic. Noise, pollution, and overcrowding are also big problems. Furthermore, with so many people living in the same place, it's easy for illnesses to spread. If you're not careful, you could (1) _____ the flu or a cold. Despite the difficulties, many people still prefer living in cities because of the opportunities they provide. While there are challenges, the benefits often make (2) _____ worth it. For those who plan to move to a city, it's important to know (3) _____ to stay healthy and manage stress. Having regular exercise and eating well are key factors to enjoying city life.

Over the past 600 years, English has grown from a language of few speakers to become the dominant language of international communication. English as we know it today emerged around 1350, after having incorporated many elements of French that were introduced following the Norman invasion of 1066.

Until the 1600s, English was, for the most part, spoken only in England and had not extended even as far as Wales, Scotland, or Ireland. However, during the course of the next two centuries, English began to spread around the globe as a result of exploration, trade (including slave trade), colonization, and missionary work. Thus, small enclaves of English speakers became established and grew in various parts of the world.

As these communities proliferated, English gradually became the primary language of international business, banking and diplomacy. Currently, about 80 percent of the information stored on computer systems worldwide is English. Two-thirds of the world's science writing is in English, and English is the main language of technology, advertising, media, international airports, and air traffic controllers.

Today there are more than 700 million English users in the world, and over half of these are nonnative speakers constituting the largest number of nonnative users than any other language in the world.
