My name's Richard and I'm 11. At school, our class had a pet rabbit called Harry. His fur was brown and white. Every day I cleaned Harry's cage and gave him water. We brought him carrots, which were his favourite food. Sometimes we took Harry's box outside into the playground. We took him out of his cage and then he could smell clean air and hop on the grass.

One day when we took Harry outside we left him there because it was sunny. But when we came out after the lessons, we couldn't find Harry anywhere. We were very sad.

'Perhaps he went to the park to live with the other rabbits,' said our teacher.

The next day, she brought another rabbit to school. This one was black and we decided to call him Jim.

Jim was a fat rabbit and he ate all the food we brought him. When we took him out of his cage, he just lay down. He did not hop or jump at all. Then, one morning, I saw six baby rabbits inside the cage! I ran to tell our teacher. Then all the children in the class went to look at the babies. We were all very surprised!
