Meeting Carlos and Anna.

Carlos is tall and slim, and he works at a small bookstore downtown. He usually keeps a neat haircut, and once a month he gets a quick trim before opening the shop. When he smiles, you can see faint crow's feet near his eyes, especially after a long day of talking with customers. Today he is meeting Ana for coffee after work.

Ana is short and plump, and she teaches art classes in the evenings. She wears a soft fringe that falls over her forehead, and she sometimes chooses a wig for performances with her students. This afternoon her red eyes show she has been tired, but she laughs anyway and tells Carlos about a funny mistake in class. They sit by the window, share a pastry, and plan a weekend walk. Before leaving, they write a short list of goals, and promise to call each other tomorrow morning early.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Mr. Ortega was an old man who walked slowly to the park every morning. He was thin, but his smile was strong. His spiky hair looked funny under the sun. His left eye was blind in one eye, so he turned his head to listen and look. Even so, he greeted everyone politely. He carried a small radio and hummed old songs. Children waved and he answered with a calm good morning.

Doña Marta, an old woman, sat on the same bench. She was a little chubby and always carried a bag of seeds for pigeons. She had shoulder-length hair, and she tied it back with a simple ribbon. Today it looked like very long hair because she had not cut it for months. She was blind without her glasses, and she had a stye on her eyelid. Still, her slanting eyes looked kind when she laughed.

1) Spiky hair is hair that _____
a) is tied high on the head
b) has soft waves
c) stands up in pointed spikes
d) covers the forehead

2) If someone is blind, they_____
