Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

Cultural diversity is like having a big mix of different cultures all living together in one place. It's not just about different traditions and languages; it's about the unique ways people live their lives. This mix is crucial for creating a friendly and connected world, where everyone's uniqueness is not just accepted but also celebrated.

One of the most interesting things about cultural diversity is that it allows us to share and exchange ideas. When people from different cultures meet, it's like a cultural exchange programme happening naturally. We get to learn from each other, understand different perspectives, and appreciate the varied combination of human experiences. This mutual learning helps us realise that even though we may be from different backgrounds, we share more similarities than differences.

Cultural diversity isn't just about the present, it's also about the preservation of the past. Every culture has its own special story, a history that goes way back, and things they always do like traditions. When we celebrate cultural diversity, we're not just acknowledging where people come from, we're recognising the wealth of knowledge and wisdom that has been passed down through generations.

Moreover, this mix of cultures makes our world interesting and more creative. It's like a buffet of creativity! When people from different backgrounds work together, they bring unique insights and approaches. This variety of new ideas and creative solutions allows society to develop in different areas, from technology and science to art and entertainment. To keep this great mix of cultures lively, we must make an effort to actively include everyone. Being inclusive means making sure everyone feels welcome, regardless of where they're from or what language they speak. Schools, workplaces, and communities all play a role in connecting.

In conclusion, cultural diversity is not just a fancy term, it's about appreciating and celebrating the richness of human differences. By embracing our diversity, we create a world where everyone belongs, where our unique cultures are valued, and where the collective human experience becomes even more beautiful.

Question 1: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 2?
