Exercise 1: Reading

Teenagers and Their Daily Life

Many teenagers always begin their day early. They usually get up at 6 or 7 a.m. Some students drink milk or juice. Others eat cereal before school.

Teenagers often go to school with their friends. Some students come by bus. Others drive with their parents. They usually feel excited to see their classmates.

At school classes begin at 8 a.m. Students often do homework in class. In art class they draw pictures. Sometimes teachers give interesting projects.

Many students sometimes bring snacks. They eat sandwiches or fruit. Some students buy food in the cafeteria. Lunch usually costs a few dollars.

After school some teens build things in technology class. Others grow plants in the school garden. Some students catch the bus home. Others fly home in their imagination while daydreaming.

At home teenagers usually do homework. They sometimes break pencils or cut paper for projects. Some students find answers on the internet. They often know more after studying.

At night teens rarely leave homework unfinished. They usually keep their books ready. Sometimes they lose a notebook and feel stressed. But they always feel proud when they finish their work.
