Five unusual foods you need to try

Have you ever heard of any of the unusual foods in the pictures in this article? Our experts have tried them so you can find out about them.

Tempeh

This delicious food comes from cooked soya beans (a type of bean common in Asia, also called edamame). It comes from Indonesia. It's full of vitamins, so it's healthy. It can be fried or roasted until it's crunchy. It goes well with a spicy chilli sauce.

Natto

People in Japan often have natto for breakfast, and have eaten it for hundreds of years. It also comes from soya beans and has a strong smell and flavour. It's very popular in Japan and people eat it with rice. It has a cheesy taste and people add spices to it. It's also good for your body.

Durian

Some people love this fruit. It has an unusual flavour and the fruit is thick. However, other people hate it. It has a very strong smell and in South-East Asia, you can't eat it in some public places. In fact, many hotels and other public transport have signs with the words, 'No durian!'. However, it's very important for wildlife. Animals like elephants and monkeys eat it. The roasted seeds are also delicious.

Jackfruit

This tasty fruit looks like a durian, but it tastes very different. It grows all around the world, in Asia, Africa and South America. It's full of different vitamins. It's also very big and can weigh over fifty kilograms! People often use the fruit instead of meat because it goes well with salty dishes.

Kohlrabi

This vegetable is small - about the size of a golf ball, and it comes in two colours: light green and purple. You can eat it raw or roasted. People often add it to salads, and it's crunchy and very tasty!

People make tempeh from soya beans.

- 1 Tempeh becomes crunchy when _____.
- 2 Natto is _____ of years old.
- 3 Durian is unpopular with some people because of its _____.
- 4 Jackfruit is healthy because it has got lots of _____.
