Text 1

NEIGHBORHOOD GARDENS

I Today, many cities have neighborhood gardens. People make these gardens near their homes. Everyone who lives in the neighborhood works in them together. They grow fruit, vegetables, and flowers.

II Jane Wilson has a neighborhood garden near her home. She likes to go there often.
5 "It's a good way to meet people," she says. "And it's fun to see the plants grow." Jane and her neighbors take fruit and vegetables from the garden.

III Neighborhood gardens are also good for children. They love playing in these gardens. They also like helping their parents there. For example, they give water to the plants, and they pick apples and other fruit. Children also like showing their friends the fruit and vegetables that 10 they grow.

IV Many people want to have a neighborhood garden where they can grow fruit and vegetables. But they have a problem. They don't know how to make a garden. However, in every neighborhood there are usually some people who know a lot about gardens. These people can choose the right plants for the garden. They can also explain how to look after the plants.
15 Then everyone in the neighborhood can grow fruit and vegetables.
