

The London News

3rd September 1666

Great Fire Destroys London!

Yesterday, a huge fire broke out in a small, wooden bakery on Pudding Lane. The flames spread rapidly because the old, wooden houses were built very close together. The strong, roaring wind made the fire grow bigger and stronger. People were asleep when the fire started.

People tried to put out the fire with buckets of water, but the flames were too powerful. There were many frightened families who ran through the narrow streets to escape, and even the tall stone building has been destroyed.

Tragically, thousands of people have lost their homes, but some were able to escape to the River Thames.

This is my home, so I can't leave!

The fire which seemed endless burned through the city.

The King of England has ordered workers to pull down houses to stop the flames. The fire is still burning, and the people are fearful. Mr. Smith was heard shouting, "This is my home, so I can't leave!"

The king of England is asking people to stay hopeful because help is on the way.

We hope the fire will end soon.

By Thomas Brown, Reporter

Conclusion

Caption

Name of the Picture

Opening

Headline

newspaper

Date

Main Events

LIVEWORKSHEETS