The happiest countries in the world

The United Nations published a World Happiness Report in 2019. Here are the top five countries:

- In the Netherlands, happiness starts young. A report rated Dutch children the happiest in the world, based on the quality of education, safety, and health.
- Icelanders like to care for each other, especially in difficult times. Perhaps it is because Icelanders have the opportunity to escape the city to a countryside that looks like another planet.
- Norway has an excellent welfare system and a strong economy built on the protection of the environment. This means its citizens trust the government and this contributes to their overall happiness.
- Denmark is home to the world's most bike-friendly city (Copenhagen) and a beautiful coastline. Also, the Danes have economic security, freedom, and a good work-life balance.
- Finland's education system ranks among the top in the world. Much of that educational success comes from a respect for teachers and high-quality learning. The country's tourism board ran a 'Rent a Finn' competition where the winners got a free trip to experience that happiness!
