The story, is told through the eyes of a young thief who calls herself Tokyo. She is on the run and mourning the death of her boyfriend, who was her partner in crime. Tokyo is angry, impetuous. She has nowhere to turn. Her own mother wants to hand her over to the police. Unexpectedly, she is given a lifeline*.

A mysterious man known only as The Professor approaches her, promising redemption and, one big heist enough to set her up for life. She is introduced to seven other like-minded individuals, each with their own eccentricities and a very particular set of skills.

The thieves agree that real names and personal information should be off-limits. Each member chooses the name of a different city: Moscow, Tokyo, Berlin, Rio and so on. The plan is perfect. The Professor insists that no blood will be spilled and that they will steal money that belongs to no one. And yet, as they inevitably do, things go wrong. Of course they do.

Tokyo, being Tokyo, flouts* The Professor's rules, and starts a romantic relationship with Rio, the electronics expert. Their romance causes more than just headaches for the gang.

The acting in the series is pitch-perfect. Money Heist is one of those rare shows that does not demand just your time, but your attention. Savour it.
