Making Inferences #1

Name _____ Date _____

 Read the following situations and let's do some inferences.

Sara was in extreme pain. She had spent the entire day on the beach, swimming in the ocean and playing sand volleyball with her friends. Now, it felt like her entire body was on fire. "Oh my goodness," her sister had said when she arrived home late that afternoon. "You are as red as a lobster!"	What happened to Sara? _____ _____ How do you know? _____ _____
"Hop in the chair," the man told the little boy. As the boy climbed onto the tall chair, the man turned to the boy's mom. "How much do you want off? "It's pretty long. Go ahead and take off a good inch," answered the mother. The man picked up his scissors. "Okay, if you sit here really still, I'll give you a sucker when we are done," he bribed the child.	What was the man going to do for the little boy? _____ _____ How do you know? _____ _____
Juani looked out the window, amazed at what he saw! Millions of tiny white balls were falling through the sky and collecting on the ground outside his school window. He had only ever seen anything like this in photographs, never in real life.	What was happening outside? _____ _____ How do you know? _____ _____
