Many older people are now using the Internet. At first, many of them didn't want to learn about computers. They thought computers were difficult to use and that they cost a lot of money. Then, some grandparents learned how to use email to write to their grandchildren. Later, they started to talk with their friends in other cities using social media. It was fun and cheaper than using the telephone. Now older people are using the Internet to check the weather, make airline reservations, find movie reviews, and even follow their favorite sports teams.
