Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 36.

Not long ago, choosing a career was a fairly simple decision. Most young people followed the paths their parents had already walked. A farmer's son often became a farmer. A teacher's daughter was likely to become a teacher herself. Today, however, new industries appear every few years, old jobs disappear, and young people face a much wider range of choices than any generation before them. For many teenagers, this freedom is exciting. For others, it feels overwhelming, like standing at a crossroads with too many roads and no map.

On one side, many young people feel genuinely fortunate. They can become app developers, environmental scientists, or social entrepreneurs, careers that simply did not exist a generation ago. The internet allows a teenager in a small town to learn coding or design skills online and compete in a global market. From this point of view, the wide-open future is not a source of stress but a real opportunity for those who are curious and adaptable.

On the other side, many families feel that this rapidly changing world brings real pressure. When career paths shift so quickly, it is hard to know which skills will still be relevant in ten or twenty years. There is also the question of identity. In many cultures, a person's career is closely tied to their role in the family. Choosing an unconventional path can sometimes mean going against the expectations of people you love, and that is not a small thing.

Question 31: Which of the following is TRUE about career choices in the past?

A. Young people had more opportunities to choose jobs that did not exist.

B. Most individuals had the freedom to change their career paths frequently.

C. Career paths were often inherited from the previous generation's occupations.

D. Teenagers faced significant pressure to avoid their parents' professions.

Question 32: The word "overwhelming" in the first paragraph is closest in meaning to _____.

A. interesting B. confusing C. rewarding D. permanent

Question 33: The word "relevant" in the third paragraph is opposite in meaning to _____.

A. important B. necessary C. useless D. available

Question 34: According to the second paragraph, why is the modern job market considered an opportunity?

A. It guarantees that all teenagers will find jobs that match their interests.

B. It eliminates the need for any formal education or technical training.

C. It allows young people to leverage digital tools to access global markets.

D. It ensures that traditional jobs like farming will disappear completely.

Question 35: Why does the writer compare career choice today to standing at a crossroads with no map?

A. To show that most jobs now require travel between places

B. To suggest that family advice is no longer useful at all

C. To highlight the stress of having many unclear options

D. To explain that old careers are now more attractive again

Question 36: Which of the following best summarises the main content of the passage?

A. The technological advancements that have created new job roles for teenagers.

B. The complexities and emotional challenges of choosing a career in a modern era.

C. The historical transition from agricultural jobs to modern digital professions.

D. The necessity of following parents' advice to achieve success in a changing world.

What Makes a Community Strong?

Today, people live in very different ways. Some enjoy the busy rhythm of city life, while others prefer the peace of the countryside. (37) _____. However, as life becomes faster, many communities are facing serious problems such as pollution, weak social connections, and the loss of local traditions.

In many places, old customs are slowly disappearing because people are too busy to keep them alive. Some teenagers know (38) _____. At the same time, climate change and natural disasters are affecting both cities and rural areas. These problems remind us that a strong community is not built only with roads, buildings, or electronic devices. It is also built with care, responsibility, and respect for people and nature.

Fortunately, many young people are (39) _____. They take part in clean-up events, help older people, support local products, and learn more about traditional values. (40) _____. In a world that is changing quickly, perhaps the most important progress is not only moving forward, but also knowing what should be kept close to our hearts.

A. more about global trends than about their own heritage

B. Young people often dream of modern jobs, smart technology, and exciting experiences

C. Small actions can protect heritage and improve daily life

D. becoming more active in their local communities

Question 37: _____. Question 38: _____. Question 39: _____. Question 40: _____.
