Should You Listen to Music While You Study?

Many students wonder if listening to music while studying is a good idea. The answer depends on your personality and what you are studying.

On one hand, music can make studying more enjoyable. If you are doing repetitive tasks, like organizing notes or drawing, background music can help you stay relaxed and focused. Many people prefer "lo-fi" beats or classical music because these styles don't have lyrics. Without words, the music doesn't distract your brain from reading.

On the other hand, listening to songs with lyrics can be a problem. When you try to memorize new words or write an essay, your brain has to process language. If you listen to a song with singing, your brain gets "noisy," and it becomes harder to remember information. This is called the "irrelevant sound effect."

In conclusion, if you need to concentrate deeply, silence is usually best. However, if you are bored or doing easy work, light music without lyrics can be a great tool to keep you motivated. You should experiment to see what works for you!

23. Background music is helpful when you are doing repetitive tasks like drawing.
24. Most people prefer music with lyrics while they are reading books.
25. The "irrelevant sound effect" makes it easier for your brain to remember new information.
26. Silence is generally recommended for tasks that require deep concentration.
27. Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?
- A. Silence is a requirement for any student aiming for high academic achievement.
 - B. Repetitive tasks are effectively performed in a silent environment.
 - C. Music without lyrics can be beneficial to certain tasks.
 - D. Classical music is more effective than lo-fi beats for improving memory.
28. According to the passage, why is it difficult to write an essay while listening to songs with lyrics?
- A. Because the "irrelevant sound effect" only happens when writing.
 - B. Because the brain struggles to process two different language sources at once.
 - C. Because "lo-fi" beats are more motivating for creative writing.
 - D. Because singing makes the listener want to stop studying and dance.
