Helping the homeless

Fourteen-year-old Jacob Reddy is from Blackburn in England. When he heard about a local charity called Community Spirit that helps homeless people, he knew he had to do something. Volunteers at the charity give food and warm clothes to homeless people.

Jacob is a hard-working, generous teen. He was upset about this terrible problem so he decided to write a song. He spent a few months writing and practising his song. Then it was time to record it. Imogen Storey and James Duckworth have got a recording studio in Blackburn. When they heard what Jacob was doing, they offered him their studio to record his song – free!

Jacob's song is now on his YouTube™ page but it will soon be available to buy online. All the money will go to Community Spirit to help homeless people. People at the charity are really happy about the song and they think Jacob is very kind. They will play his song this winter so people remember the homeless. Because winter is colder and wetter than other times of year, they need to raise more money.

Soon, Jacob is going to go to Kigali in Rwanda, Africa with his school. There, he's going to work with other teenagers to teach children who don't have homes. Jacob is working hard to get the money for his trip. He often busks (plays music on the street) in town. We hope he gets all the money he needs for his trip!
