Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions from 27 to 32.

Nowadays, most teenagers spend many hours a day using their smartphones, tablets, or computers. The screens of these devices give off something called blue light. Blue light is a type of light that comes from digital screens and even from the sun. It helps us stay awake during the day, but too much exposure to it at night can be harmful to our health.

Blue light can cause several problems for teenagers. It can make our eyes tired and dry after looking at the screen for a long time. It also affects our sleep because it tricks our brain into thinking it is still daytime, so we can't fall asleep easily. In the long term, it may even damage our eyesight. Moreover, spending too much time on phones can lead to stress and less face-to-face communication with friends and family.

To protect ourselves, we should limit screen time, especially before going to bed. Teenagers can turn on the "night mode" or use blue light filter apps to reduce the effect. It's also good to take a short break every 30 minutes and look at something far away. Most importantly, we should balance online and offline life to stay both healthy and happy.

Question 27: What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. The history of smartphones and digital devices
- B. The harmful effects of blue light and how to protect ourselves
- C. How teenagers use social media to communicate
- D. The benefits of spending time online
