A day in Transilvania.

Transilvania, a region in Romania, is famous for Castle Dracula and frightening stories about vampires, but in reality, the country is very beautiful with fascinating culture and picturesque spots. A group of teenagers went to Transilvania to explore the place and find real vampires.

On our first day in Romania, we took a bus tour around local villages and small cities. We loved the tour, it was fantastic! We saw huge mountains and tiny villages, met friendly people and tasted excellent food. Romanians eat a lot of meat, so meat dishes are very popular there.

On our second day, we visited several museums. I think Astra Museum in Transilvania, the second largest open-air museum in the world, was the most exciting. There we saw very old village houses, windmills and huge oil presses.

On our last day, the weather got worse. It was raining all day long and the wind was freezing. We were really annoyed, so we decided to go to an old castle and search for vampires. During the tour around the castle, the guide told about the hidden rooms and secret corridors believed to be the home of vampires. We got very excited imagining what we might discover in those rooms.

As the tour progressed, our imagination ran wild. We hoped to see or feel or hear something unusual. Unfortunately, we saw only old and dirty halls full of tourists.

Anyway, our trip to Transilvania was fascinating. I hope to come back to Romania for a longer time, learn more about the country and find a real vampire.
