Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 36.

Teenage years are a time when your young people grow and develop really quickly, and the requirements for some vitamins and minerals, like calcium and iron, is fairly high. The age at which your child will have a growth spurt will vary, but in girls the growth spurt normally peaks at 12.5 years of age, and in boys at age 14 years of age.

Many lifestyle changes take place during adolescence. When children start secondary school, they often have more independence and greater control over the choices they make. They can often make decisions about what and when they want to eat, and how they spend their free time. Media can often be a challenge promoting the "thin" body ideal, as well as challenging other aspects of your family values and beliefs. This may result in difficulty for them knowing what a healthy weight and lifestyle is, and this has the potential to lead to unhealthy eating habits and beliefs.

It is important to listen to what your young people are saying, and explore with them what their views and opinions are. Accepting and understanding your child's point of view, even if you don't agree, is an essential part of parenting adolescents to keep lines of communication open. If you build good routines around healthy eating and exercise, they will have an understanding that people come in all different shapes and sizes, and by eating a healthy, varied diet and taking part in regular physical activity, their weight should stay healthy.
