The Edinburgh Festival is one of the most famous events in the UK during the summer. However, it isn't just one event – it actually includes eight different festivals happening at the same time, such as the Art Festival, the Book Festival, the International Festival, the Fringe, and the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo.

The Edinburgh Festival has been taking place every August since 1947, with the exception of 2020. The idea for the festival came from an Austrian man named Rudolf Bing, who was passionate about the arts and supported them financially. Bing was the manager of the well-known Glyndebourne Opera House in southern England. He wanted to create an international celebration of music and opera to raise money for the Opera House. Many cities were considered for the event, including Oxford, but in the end, Edinburgh was chosen because of its strong tradition of hosting festivals.

If you plan to visit the festival, it's important to prepare in advance. Each year, hundreds of thousands of people come, so you should reserve your accommodation and tickets for popular performances ahead of time. But don't schedule everything! You'll discover many amazing, lesser-known shows and performers while you're there, and it could be disappointing if you're too busy to see them.
