In the future, jobs are expected to change significantly because of rapid technological development and social needs. Many traditional jobs may disappear, while new ones will be created in areas such as artificial intelligence, renewable energy, and digital services. As machines and software become more advanced, workers will need to focus on skills that technology cannot easily replace, including creativity, critical thinking, and communication.

Working styles are also likely to change. More people may work remotely or choose flexible schedules, which can help them balance work and personal life better. At the same time, teamwork will remain important, especially when people cooperate with colleagues from different countries and cultures.

Education will play a key role in preparing people for future careers. Students will need to develop practical skills and be willing to learn throughout their lives. Although future jobs may bring challenges, they will also offer new opportunities for personal growth and professional success.

23. Technology will cause both job loss and the creation of new careers.

24. Future workers will only need technical skills to succeed at work.

25. Remote working may help people balance work and personal life better.

26. Lifelong learning will be necessary to prepare students for future careers.

27. What can be inferred about future education from the passage?

A. Formal education will no longer be necessary for students.

B. Students will only need skills learned at school.

C. Learning will continue throughout people's working lives.

D. Education will focus mainly on physical labor skills.

28. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the text?

A. The disappearance of some traditional jobs

B. Flexible working schedules and remote work

C. The importance of creativity and communication skills

D. Government laws controlling future employment
