Part 1 – Reading

Laura works in a hospital in Bogotá. She is a safety assistant. Every morning, she checks the emergency exits. She likes helping people at work and loves organizing safety materials. However, she hates dangerous situations. Last year, there was a small accident in the laboratory because a worker slipped on the wet floor. Laura called the supervisor immediately. The supervisor was calmer than the workers. The hospital is bigger than the old clinic and it is also the safest building in the area. Workers must wear helmets and gloves, and they have to follow safety rules every day. Employees should report problems quickly. Some workers enjoy safety training classes, but others don't like long meetings. Next month, Laura is going to organize a new workshop about fire prevention. Laura thinks safety is the most important responsibility at work.
