Who do you look up to?

Have you heard of Malala Yousafzai? She was born in Pakistan in 1997. When she was 11, she started writing a blog about the bad situation of girls and women in her area. Three years later, some people tried to kill her because they didn't like her opinions. She almost didn't survive. Then, when she was only 17, she was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize!

Bill Gates is one of the richest people in the world. He set up a very important software company when he was only 20. But that's not why I admire him. I look up to him because he's used his money to improve the lives of people around the world. Gates has said he will give at least half of his money to good causes.

These days, everyone looks up to athletes, singers or films stars. But not me! The person that I look up to the most is ... my mum! She hasn't come up with any exciting new inventions. And she hasn't taken part in any famous projects. But she always thinks of others before herself. And she's always cheerful and optimistic and never gives up!
