The Lantern Craftsmen of the Suburbs

In a quiet suburb of the city, a family of local artisans is working hard to preserve their traditional handicraft: making paper fans and lanterns. This craft has been passed down through four generations, starting from their great-grandfather. They use local bamboo to build the frames, and then they cover them with colourful silk or paper. The process requires a lot of patience and skill. To maintain high quality, the artisans do not use modern machines. They prefer to make every single item by hand, ensuring that each lantern has a unique design.

Their workshop is now a popular tourist attraction. Visitors from all over the country come to look around the facility and buy these beautiful souvenirs. The artisans also hold weekend classes to teach local children how to make simple paper fans.
