Supporting Our Senior Neighbours

In our local community, a group of responsible volunteers has started a new delivery service to help elderly neighbours. Many of these senior residents live alone in the suburb and find it difficult to go out for shopping or medical check-ups. The volunteers visit them twice a week to deliver fresh food, medicines, and household goods. They also help with simple tasks around the house, such as repairing electrical wires or watering the garden. By taking care of these daily needs, the volunteers make the neighborhood a much safer and friendlier place.

Additionally, the local hospital helps by sending nurses to the community centre to provide free health check-ups once a month. The senior residents are very grateful for this program. They say it gives them a chance to meet people and feel connected to the younger generation. The volunteers also enjoy the work because they can learn valuable advice and life lessons from the stories passed down by the elderly.
