Like many other Marvel Universe fans, I was really looking forward to seeing Endgame, the last part of the Avengers series. I really wanted to know what would happen to all the characters that disappeared in the previous part and to those that survived when Thanos snapped his fingers. No spoiler alert here, I won't reveal anything about the plot, I'll just say that the film is amazing. I loved the first hour, which wasn't so action-packed, but gave me a much better understanding of the characters. And the special effects - just wow!

The Metropolitan Opera House

The Met, as it is usually called, is located on Broadway in New York City. The building we can see today opened in 1966 and replaced the old building of the Metropolitan Opera, which became too small and old-fashioned. The Met now has one of the most technologically advanced stages in the world, with many elevators and motorised elements. It mainly hosts operas and ballet productions, but there are many other performances as well, such as recitals and concerts by world-famous pop artists.

B.

The Royal Opera House

This famous building is usually called Covent Garden, the same as the London district in which it is located. The first opera house building opened in 1732, but it was completely destroyed in a fire in 1808, and then again in 1856. One of the most famous Baroque composers, George Frideric Handel, wrote many of his operas for this opera house. The building hosts many events, including the British Academy Film Awards ceremony.

C.

The Sydney Opera House

This opera house is one of the most famous buildings of the 20th century. It is located in Sydney Harbour, right next to the ocean. The building consists of many different performance venues, such as a concert hall, a drama theatre and a recording studio. Since its opening in 1973 it has become one of the most popular destinations for people coming to Australia, with more than 8 million visitors every year. VISITING FRANCE BY TRAIN

If you plan to visit France, you should try travelling by TGV. It is a French inter-city high-speed rail service which has operated since 1966. And by 'high-speed' I mean incredibly fast! Although normal TGV trains go at about 300km/h, a TGV test train reached over 570 km/h in 2007 and beat the world speed record for a train with wheels.

If you decide to go by TGV you can buy tickets via the Internet before you set off. The coaches in the train are spacious and comfortable. The passengers have free access to WiFi and they can even order online from the train restaurant which offers dishes prepared by professional chefs. You can travel in the first or in the second class. The first class has fewer seats and more space to sit, but the tickets are more expensive. However, if you book your seat three months in advance, you'll get a lower price. There are also discounts for groups of between four and seven people, so if you want to travel with your friends or family, you pay 25% less. You can also take your bike on the train if you pay €10 extra.

1. In 2007 a TGV test train became _____ with wheels in the world.
2. On the train you can use the Internet to _____ from the restaurant.
3. Your ticket _____ if you book early or travel with a group.

FREELIFE Freedom and Lifestyle Blog

15th August

I've just come back from a backpacking holiday in the south of Poland and it was nothing like the beach holiday last year. I'm totally exhausted! I've always thought I'm fit and that even a lot of walking can't make me tired, but it appears I was completely wrong...

That got me thinking about my shape and what I should do to improve it. We all know that exercising is good for your health and that we should all spend some time every day being physically active. But for me it was always difficult, as I'm not like one of those people who find pleasure in torturing themselves in the gym. Jogging or cycling are not my cup of tea either.

For now I've decided to take up swimming. It's good for my whole body, which is great. But, guess what, I also bought a dancing game for my games console. You watch the people dance on the screen and try to copy their moves, and you get points for that! I have to admit I really like it and it's great for beginners like me. But I suppose if you want to do all the moves correctly, dance classes would be a better idea.
