Time management is an essential skill for students to learn. If they want to manage their time effectively, they should start by planning a daily schedule. Using a to-do list can help them track what needs to be done. Students must decide which task is the most important so that they can prioritise it. They should not delay their assignments until the last minute because it will bring unnecessary stress. To achieve timely completion, they must get rid of all distractions when studying. For example, they should sign out of social media and turn off their phones. By dividing their time wisely between schoolwork and relaxation, they can keep a healthy balance. These good habits will enhance their productivity and help them accomplish their academic goals.

The Dangers of Poor Lifestyle Choices

Many teenagers today make poor lifestyle choices that can harm their physical and mental health. Two of the most common issues are eating too much junk food and staying up late. Many students rely on fast food because it is quick and convenient. However, these foods are often fattening and contain unhealthy ingredients. If teenagers eat them regularly, they may put on weight and experience health problems. Furthermore, junk foods do not provide the energy that the body needs, which can make students feel tired and less alert in class.

Staying up late to study or play games is also dangerous. If students do not get enough sleep, their health will suffer. A lack of sleep affects brain development and makes it difficult to concentrate. When students are tired, they are also more likely to feel stressed out and experience anxiety. To prevent these problems, teenagers should learn to manage their time effectively. They should prioritise their tasks so that they can finish their schoolwork early and get a good night's sleep. By making healthier choices, they can keep a balance and perform better at school.

25. What is the primary danger of fast food mentioned in the passage?
- It does not taste as good as home-cooked meals.
 - It makes students feel tired and less alert.
 - It has too many foreign ingredients inside.
 - It is too expensive for teenagers to buy daily.
26. The word "them" in the first paragraph refers to _____.
- choices
 - ingredients
 - junk foods
 - teenagers
27. According to the passage, how does lack of sleep affect students' brains?
- It makes them feel optimistic about tests.
 - It makes it difficult for them to concentrate.
 - It helps them solve mathematics tasks faster.
 - It increases their level of school productivity.
28. What should teenagers do to get a good night's sleep?
- Play computer games in their home gym.
 - Consult a doctor about their daily schedule.
 - Manage their time and finish schoolwork early.
 - Eat more fattening ingredients for dinner.
