UNIT 1

Celebrating Success: Identifying compliments and Congratulations in Multimodal Texts

Learning Objectives:

By the end of the lesson, given a series of everyday multimodal texts, the students will be able to analyze the visual context and categorize the corresponding written compliments into specific types.

By the end of the lesson, given a context-rich reading worksheet containing multimodal texts, the students will be able to evaluate the sender's intent based on the text's content and determine the context of the messages.

Mandatory graduation post.

Hi! So...
It's been a wonderful journey, especially since it's my very first time living alone (plus abroad) away from my family. Surely it was not a walk in the park, I had my lowest lows during my time here. But, I believe I achieved my two initial and ultimate goals of choosing Lille—getting out of my comfort zone and 'experience' self-development to become the better version of An.

For all the people who have been there for me throughout this journey and new people who have shared their moments with me here, thank you. I'll remember and cherish all the good things. ♡

Wow, so cool to see that Kamei Golf. I think was about 9 years old when the 1/24 kit came out. My family lived in Tokyo at the time and I remember receiving this kit for free at a VW dealership's promo day my dad took me to.

It's really cool seeing cars we loved as kids.

That's so nicely done. I want to build something like this rather than buy it though. Probably the 2nd gen Mugen CRX from Gran Turismo 1

E. Reflection

Read and Analyze

1. Students discuss briefly: "How do pictures and visual clues help us understand the meaning of English texts better?"

2. Students reflect on what they have learned, and if they know how to use complimentary or congratulatory words in a sentence

3. The students are asked to look up examples of complementary / congratulatory texts to familiarize themselves.
