Passage 27

The world is presently struggling against a great economic crisis. Many people fear that there will be a repeat of the Great Depression that lasted for a decade, from 1929 to the late 1930s. Like the case today, the Great Depression also began in the United States, marked by the stock market crash on October 29, 1929. After previous years of lavish indulgence, the world at that time experienced an economic downfall that left many nations and people in absolute poverty. The natural economic cycle includes periods of recession and prosperity, but many are fearful that a deep recession will cause another worldwide economic collapse.

Question

During the Great Depression, people were still alarmed by a possible recession.

Passage 28

Children are the hope of the future. However, a number of children learn to commit crimes at an early age. Parents should be aware that children are very impressionable. This means that they are readily influenced by the people around them and the experiences they encounter. Without proper guidance, children can easily imitate bad behavior. This can escalate to juvenile criminal behavior if not addressed immediately. Hence, it is important to give proper attention and guidance to children and the youth.

Question

Children experiencing great peer pressure early in life might become juvenile delinquents.
