The RMS Titanic was one of the largest ships ever built at the time. It left England on its first voyage in April 1912 and was travelling to New York with more than 2,200 people on board. Many passengers believed the ship was extremely safe because it had been designed using advanced technology.

However, on the night of April 14, the Titanic struck an iceberg in the North Atlantic Ocean. Although the crew tried to save the ship, the damage was too severe. During the following hours, passengers and crew members were evacuated into lifeboats.

The Titanic eventually sank in the early morning of April 15. More than 1,500 people lost their lives in the disaster. The tragedy shocked the world and led to important changes in maritime safety regulations. For example, ships were required to carry enough lifeboats for everyone on board and improve communication systems at sea.

Today, the story of the Titanic continues to interest people around the world. Books, documentaries, and films have helped new generations learn about the disaster and the lessons that were learned from it.
