READING

Reading Text: Grandpa's Childhood

When my grandfather was a boy, life was very different. He used to live in a small farmhouse in the countryside. There was no electricity in his village, so he didn't use to watch television or play video games after school. Instead, he used to spend his afternoons playing outside with his brothers or helping his father on the farm.

He used to walk three miles every morning just to get to school, even when it was raining. "We didn't use to complain about it," he always tells me, "because everyone did the same." Today, he lives in a big city and loves using his smartphone, but he always says he misses the quiet life he used to have.

Read the questions and choose the correct answer
