Instructions: Read the text and choose the best answer.

Life inequalities are common in many societies and affect people's opportunities, well-being, and quality of life. Some of the most common inequalities include unequal access to education, healthcare, clean water, and employment. Gender inequality, economic inequality, and discrimination based on race, disability, or social background also create unfair advantages for some groups while limiting others. These inequalities often begin early in life and can continue across generations. To help prevent them, collaboration is essential at both individual and community levels. People can promote equality by respecting differences, supporting inclusive education, and standing against discrimination. Communities and governments can work together to improve access to basic services, create fair laws, and provide support for vulnerable groups. Volunteering, sharing resources, and raising awareness are simple but powerful ways to collaborate. By working together and promoting fairness, societies can reduce inequalities and create better opportunities for everyone.

1. What is one effect of life inequalities?

A. They improve quality of life.
B. They increase access to education.
C. They limit people's opportunities and well-being.
D. They create better employment opportunities.

2. Which of the following is mentioned as a common inequality?

A. Differences in hobbies.
B. Unequal access to healthcare.
C. Differences in cultural traditions.
D. Unequal access to transportation.

3. When can inequalities begin?

A. Early in life.
B. During adulthood.
C. After people start working.
D. After people finish their education.

4. What can individuals do to promote equality?

A. Support discrimination.
B. Focus only on their own needs.
C. Avoid people who are different from them.
D. Respect differences and support inclusive education.

5. How can communities and governments help reduce inequalities?

A. By avoiding collaboration.
B. By limiting access to basic services.
C. By providing opportunities only to certain groups.
D. By creating fair laws and improving access to basic services.

LIVEWORKSHEETS