Teacher Jane Martin's Favourite Hobby

I'm a history teacher at the local secondary school and I've been doing this job for over 30 years, so as you can expect, I'm a real expert when it comes to reading documents, checking monuments and even marking essays! However, when I'm not in the classroom with my students, you can find me ice skating at the ice skating rink in the city centre. I absolutely love it - while it takes time for you to really feel at ease on the ice, I think it's one of the most relaxing sports there is.

There's a disbelief that people who are interested in history or other difficult subjects don't have time to do exercise or even have a hobby, but that isn't the case at all for me. I always make sure I take out some time to spend just an hour whizzing along the ice with my friends or even alone, practising the new tricks I've learnt with my trainer. It really helps to clear my mind and refocus for the days ahead at my job.

While I'm in my late fifties now, many people think I'm twenty years younger because of how fit and healthy I am - you could say ice skating is what helps me to feel and look so good because of how much stamina and agility you need to be able to do it well. However, as a child, I actually hated sports and I cried whenever I had to play football! I much preferred to sit indoors reading a good book or painting beautiful pictures at my grandma's house - I would have never imagined I'd enjoy skating along a thin layer of ice so much.

About 10 years ago, I was watching television with my husband and we decided to watch a reality TV show in which professional ice skaters teach ordinary people how to skate and dance on the ice. I was blown away by it all, so I signed up for beginner level ice skating classes the week after, and the rest is history!

I'm currently training for my first competition next month, and although I'm a little nervous about how it will go, I'm glad I've decided to do something out of my comfort zone. And, in the end, it's the taking part that counts.
