The Earthquake

Instructions: Read chapters 6 & 7 and answer the comprehension questions below. Also, practice reading the following text out loud—with English rhythm and pronunciation.

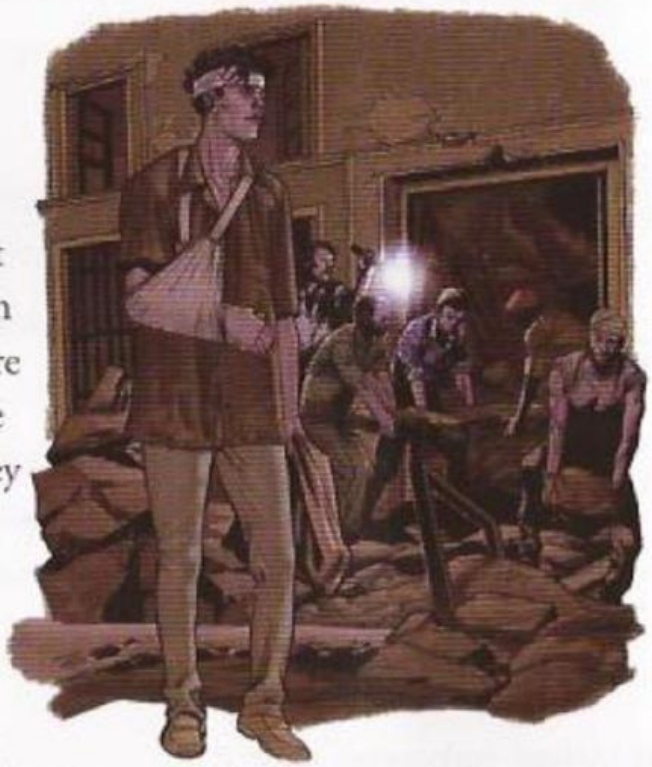

It was early in the morning when Gabriel arrived at the Delgados' flat. His arm hurt badly, and he was terribly thirsty.

The street was quieter now. Most people were out in the country, or in the parks outside the town. But there were four or five men at work in the ruins of the building next door. They pulled the rubble away.

Gabriel watched them for a minute. Suddenly, they stopped working and listened.

'I can hear something!' one man said. 'Here! I think it's a child. Quick! Come and help!'

Gabriel went to them.
